COMMENT OF THE DAY

WHAT arrant poppycock Mr Roger Diplock talks about | goods exported from Hongkong. In a letter to The Times he makes the most ridiculuous allegations we've heard yet. He says: "There seems to be little or no doubt that the bulk of merchandise coming from Hongkong is Japanese Japanese goods masquerade as Hongkong products to benefit in one way or another from passing through the Colony." That's not the kind of statement we expect from a man in his job (he's the Secretary of the British Retail Trading - Standards Association). It's the kind of cheap sneer we would expect from an irresponsible. ill-informed Opposition M.P. Only one sensible remark was made by Mr Diplock and that was there should be a Government inquiry. Hongkong would welcome that for it would vindicate our exporters and manufacturers and put an to the mischievous criticism hurled at us by British manufacturers. As far as "Hongkong" goods are concerned, here are the facts: we produce very few materials in least 25 per cent of "local ago due to retrenchment, content" in them. Ships In Distress: Brando Plans Landslides And Floods In England

London, Nov. 26. Wind and rainstorms lashed the West Europe coast tonight, battering shipping and causing floods and landslides in South-west England.

Gale warnings were issued for the North Atlantic coast, the Irish Sea, the English Channel and the Baltic Sea.

At least 10 ships are reported to be crippled, abandoned or damaged in the North and Baltic Seas. There were no reports of any fatalities,

How To Get Rid Of The Monkeys

The Delhi Municipal Committee has decided to take measures against the monkeys who have become nuisance in parts of the city. But the Committee cannot agree on what measures to take.

The Committee has hired a contractor who gots Rs. 6/- for the contractor releases the monkeys not far from Delhi and they make their way back into the city.

Some members of the Committee suggested the monkeys should be shot or poisoned but the proposal was opposed by the majority who are Hindus to whom the monkey is sacred. One member reminded the Committee that the question of destroying monkeys was being discussed whon devoted Hindus worshipped Hanuman. Monkey God.

Another suggestion was that the monkeys caught should be branded or have their tails cut off so the catcher could not make money by catching the same monkeys repeatedly.

One suggestion was that the monkeys caught should be turned over to the Malaria institute for laboratory purposes. The Secretary of the Committee pointed out, however, that 'he institute could not handle a arge number of monkeys.

The Committee decided to continue the discussion on another day.-United Press.

In 1859, after 46 years in the Army, Barry retired and took lodgings at 14. Margaret, Street. St Marylebone. There, on July 25, 1865, he died. He was buried at Kensal Green.

And that would have been that, but for Charles Dickens,

Though the -et of motherhood seems arguable, there has never been any doubt about the chief factor in Barry's story. It is indeed a strango tale which has been told as a novel, in blographical form and in a score or so of newspaper articles in the present century. As to the information Rogers salet Sir William Mackinnon gave him there has never been a baronet named Buchan; And his account of the conversation with Mrs Tidy is practically word for word that told by Lord Albemarle in his menioirs.

Colonel Rogers, it would apnear, was an unreliable reporter. In 1895, only 30 years after Barry's death and 28 after the appearance of the article in Dickens magazine, the editor of The Langet was caked whether there was any trith in the Barry story. One would have expected that this mine of information about the medical profession could give a certain answer. He couldn't and remarked: "We have read many allusions.....but none in reliable quarter."

The Verdict

The Barry entry in the Dietionary of National Biography is highly suspect, for there is no record anywhere of the report says was made to the Horse Guards, and record there would be if one had been made. Sons Learn Manly Art From Fathers. Tutor

HE wheel of time has turned a full circle for William Ewart Tingle polished pugilist of Australian and Far Eastern title fame just over three deendes ago.

Turning his back on a glorious succession of victories in the ring, more than 20 years ago, "Billy" dipped into a rich fund of hardearned glove experience, drawing from it all the skills and wites, in order to tutor eager Shanghai youngsters in the manly art.

Hongkong. "Billy" Tingle is teaching their children.

Since his appointment in 1924 to the post of physical Instructor and games master at the Shanghai Public School, he has conched an estimated 30,000 youngsters-now scatall over the world- in Learly every indoor and outdoor sport

"I don't think there's been a Rugby Union Interport matches real fathere yet." he says against Hongkong and Japan, proudly.

But how, one may ask, can a beser, no matter how accom-Thehed in his field, be qualified to kuch horse-riding or, say, rugby"

The answer lies in just another facet of this amazing and of sport, and has played with colourius personality.

As an amateur lockey in baseball, "I've played softball, Shanghat on a memorable day though," he adds hurriedly in 1929, "Billy" booted home a pony. -Don Robledo-to pay Hs rolltary backer odds of 3037 to is a saga worth emulation by t in the partimutuell in all all aspiring young fighters probability the dividend of today, $16,000 still stands as a record in the world of punters.

After his first fight, rapidly rose to the ranks of top professional fighters. He was flyweight champion of Australia just four years later.

He intended then to sall America where a bright future in boxing seemed possible, but was persuaded by a close triend in Melbourne to try his fortune an Shanghai.

Billy landed in that Chinese city on a September day in 1923, and it was not long before he established himself as a crafty, scientific boxer, with a great faith in a lightning-fast and destructive straight left.

An unbroken line of victories followed, leaving him undefeated bantamweight champion of the Far East and the lightweight champion of China and Japan. Tingle then decided that a boxing life would be a very short one, "Get in and get out as quickly as you can," he told himself. In October 1924 he accepted a position on the staff of the Shanghal Public School

Gifted with an infinite amount of pat, ace and an innate understanding and liking of children-Billy fell in love with his work.

His extremely gentle and yet always encouraging manner, his complete ability to make a child obey him, willingly and without question, has accounted for his success as a physical training instructor.

Settled in Hongkong at praecnt, Billy Tingle provides general physical education at various schools and clubs, 12 months in the year, for children ranging from three years of age upwards.

From May to September, be may be seen waist-high in a swimming pool at either the Lades' Recreation Club or the Shek O Country Club, patiently applying his personal system of drumming into the youngsters the rudiments of the six-kick crawl, breaststroke, lifesaving and diving.

For the remaining seven months Billy instructs them in the "manly art"-or, in his own words, "boxing and all it entails . . . mental and physical co-ordination, good sportsmanship being a few of the basic requirements.

In addition to this full programme, Billy — amazingly nts in hours coaching aspiring athletes and sportsmen in the basic principles of other sportscricket, rugby, soccer and athletics.

In his early fifties now, Billy has few regrets. Instead, he looks forward to a bright future happy in the knowledge that he can continue to draw on his experiences gained over two generations to pass on to the rising generation the fine points of many branches of sport.

THE enthrolling new series which starts here today is the FULL inside story of INTERPOL, the organisation which fights international crime, through whose aid two Yard men wanted by Scotland Yard - Ronald Chesney and William Hepper-were recently run to earth and which has been the means of bringing thousands of international criminals to justice.

The veteran French police chief, one of Europe's most experienced criminologists, Monsieur MARCEL SICOT, Interpol's Secretary-General and Inspector-General of Training of the French Surete Nationale in Paris, allowed our representative full facilities for research into Interpol's methods and successes in combatting crime. To a man. M. Sicot's staff co-operated most graciously.

The work occupied many weeks and took the author. Asked to explain his presence, ports to the U.S.A., on a are issued to U.S. Service per-A. J. FORREST, and researchists, into a number of countries.

> Small wonder that international crooks fear Interpol as their most implacable enemy

Interpol fights, fundamentally, ENTERPOL by its remarkably well-documented files, and its speed in transmitting vital information to its forty-eight member countries. The dessiers contain, in its mouse-grey headquarters in the Boulevard Gouvion St. Cyr, Paris, up-to-the-minute records of 80,000 international crooks, 1,500 of whom are categorised as particularly dangerous. The Goblins'll Get You— Watch Out! By W. W. Bauer, MD

DEMEMBER the delicious thrills you used to get out of the blood-curdling tales of goblins that'll "get you if you don't watch out!" Watch out? How?

You could enjoy spine-chilling tales because you didn't really believe in goblins lurking in the dark. But even so, you went upstairs a little faster, and you didn't look back, when the light That's because for centuries the race lived in feat dark and the unknown bullt screens inside the entrances to their homes, so the from the straight line, and perhaps not be able to come in Now these seveens have become objects d'art-but they were born in ignorance, superstition and fear.

Knowledge has dispelled much of that fear, but traces of it re-Do you throw a pinch of sait over your shoulder if you spill some of the precious stuff on the tablecloth? That's a vestige of the demon-exorcising rite in which salt played a role because it was a precious substance, valuable in trade; it marked the place at table above which sat the noblity; below. the common people.

Beliefs

Everyone has his own net superstitions—sensible and d fensible—and is inclined smile at the other fellow's. The who loughs at the idea that a visible vein across the nose is a sign of short life, may not sit down with 13 people at table, or walk under a ladder A woman who is firmly convinced that getting out of bed backward means bad luck, with ridicule the auggestion that sleeping with the moon shining on the face will cause blindness -or insanity. to his own. A woman asked a doctor i wearing amber beads around the neck would project her little girl against goitre. "Yes," the doctor replied, "providing she eats plenty of deep sea fish and other lodised salt." This was a nice way of letting a superstition down without offence, and this may be important, because few ideas held by human beings are so treasured as the mistaken

But how can superstitious or mistaken beliefs harm the health? They're for laughs! Not always. There is the idea that every person must have a bowel action every day. This completely false. Bowel rhythm differs from person to person, and is affected by the diet, by emotional situation, the habit and opportunity. Good with a bowel action every day, But the belief in dally necessity Madame. has fastened upon many people an enormous laxative bill, which if cancelled would go far toward paying the costs of illness and of really necessary medicationbesides with man-made constipation. Yes-the goblins'li get you-you better watch out!

True or False

More gobiins: a drowning person always comes up three times (not so); intelligent children are likely to be physically delicate (the opposite is true); the principal cause of appendicitis is swallowing fruit or vegetable seeds (a delusion); eating animal organs such as hearts, liver, kidneys, etc., will strengthen the corresponding human organ (too bad it doesn't); constant hunger means you have a tapeworm (better not bet on it); constant grinding of the teeth indicates intestinal worms (it does not); thunder will sour the milk (not the thunder but the accompanying weather change may tuberculous persons should crummed with food particularly milk and eggs (exactly the wrong thing to do)-and so on for into the depths of man's ignorance.

Winston Churchill's 80th Birthday-Commons Presentation Of

State Opening Of. Parliament By H.M. The Queen

Sir Winston Spencer Churchill, K.G., O.M., C.H., M.P., celebrates his 80th birthday on Novemher 30. The State Opening of Parliament by Her Majesty the Queen, by a happy chance, coincides with the occasion.

On this day there will be a large gathering at Westminster of Peers and Members of Parliament for the double event of the State Opening in the morning, and the birthday presentations to the Prime Minister, which will follow soon afterwards in Westminster Hall.

The earlier part of the day's ceremonies, the Queen's procession from Buckingham Palace to Westminster for the State Opening of Parliament, will be described for listeners, in a relay from the BBC, by Wynford Vaughan Thomas, Audrey Russell, and Raymond Baxter, who will be at points along the route. Shaw Cherale, with Shirker Emmone mona paxter, who will be at points along the route. Some charge, with shirter ammone (hop.) and Raymond Keant (bar.)

THIS AFTERNOON'S RUGGER

RAF-Navy Pentangular Tourney Match Should Be Worth Seeing

By "PAK LO"

There is an alteration in this afternoon's rugger schedule from that originally published. Due to pressure of work the Police this week find themselves unable to field a full fifteen, and have therefore cancelled their Pentangular game with the Army, which was to have taken place at Kai Tak. It is hoped that they will be able to find time later to play off this match.

This, however, still leaves two games to be played this afternoon. The Club is playing the Gunners in a "friendly" on the Army ground at Boundary Street (near the Police Recreation Ground) at 2.45 p.m. prompt (all Club players please note the time) and the RAF and the Navy meet in their Pentangular game at 4.15 p.m. at Kai Tak.

Every now and again one comes across a suggestion that is worth further consideration and occasionally too there is a passing reaction of disappointment that you did not think of it first.

Sporting Record, a very popular British weekly newspaper, devotes a column to readers' suggestions and pays a nominal prize for what it considers to be the best letter of the week.

In the most recent issue a reader has received the award for a suggestion that will set lots of people thinking and I believe that while it is always difficult to succeed in getting changes made in the rules of football and few would have it otherwise—there is the basis of a good idea in this idea.

The Owner Of The Year

By RICHARD BAERLEIN

Major Lionel B. Holliday has won £4,000 less than the Queen this season, but he holds a clear lead in the winning breeders' table and is, in my opinion, entitled to be named the owner of the year.

He may be described as one of the very last of the really big owner-breeders. These men have been the backbone of racing for many years, and their passing can only be regretted.

However, with his stud in Ireland, and his racing stable in Newmarket, Major Holliday supports racing on a really gren, scale

Sharing in his successes this Humphrey Cottrill, and his Eckey, Frank Burkey, Major Holliday has switched about a good deal in trying to find an ideal combination, but he does at last appear to have found it.

SOFTBALL WEEK-END

Saints Meet Warriors; Pandas Take On U.S. Navy Tomorrow

Nine games have been arranged for this week, ad and softball lovers will enjoy some exciting and keen contests for a change. In the Senior "A" League, pennant-holding Saints will meet the fighting Warriors and the heavy-slugging Pandas will clash with a new U.S. Navy team.

Two Senior "B" games are scheduled for Sunday afternoon. Pandas 'B' will battle against the Overseas for the second time and University will again meet the mighty Blackhawks 'A'.

YOUR BURTHDAY ... By STELLA

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 27

DORN today, you have tremenous self-confidence. You are D ambitious to succeed but you are one of those who gives the appearance of going along "slow and easy", rather than bursting with energy and aggressively demanding what you want. You go about getting it-without saying much. This determination is bound to bring you to a fairly early success, "which may make some people wonder what you have—that others haven't got! One answer is imagination; the other, the ability to work hard nt the job.

Although you are impatient by nature, you have learned that you must control this if you are to get what you want. Your emotions are rather near the surface and you like to dramatise what you do. If you should go on the stage you would find this a highly valuable asset, for you are able to put yourself into character with the greatest of case.

Although you can be the life of the party, there are times when you prefer to be all by yourself. This is apt to confuse people who can never quite make out which mood you are in at the moment! Sometimes you get so involved in a project that you think of nothing else and are completely absent-minded about the ordinary things of life. At such times, a marriage partner can be of great help in smoothing things out. Be very sure it is comeone who understands your temperament or discord might cosue.

TORN today you are one of those rather rare individuals who would prefer to have a little of the best-than a great deal of anything that is second-rate. This goes for friendships as well and your happiest expression. You have a virile imagination and are a little inclined to exaggerate, at times. You enjoy being the centre of attention. Dramalising yourself and your ideas is one of your methods for putting your ideas across, too. Although you have a tremendous store of nervous energy, your physique is

DISTRESS

Clerkenwell was quiet but to Margaret, standing in the dock, the air shouting at her. She cried out loudly in reply, using words that were bell-clear to her, but meaningless to everyone else.

"She had better see the doctor," said the mogistrate, in answer to his clerk's despair of ever making Margaret understand that she was in the dock to answer a charge of being drupk and disorderly.

So Margaret was taken away. A week later she was brought back, a dark woman in a black frock, whose hair was untidy and whose face was scarlet, as though she had come straight from working over a hot stove.

Margaret said. Tears sprang They also supported, in varying from her eyes, and she brushed degrees, the Indonesian claim to wisps of hair from her face. "Sit down, then," said the Guinea (also called frian) magistrate, gently, Margaret sat, and mopped her forchead with the back of a work-lined hand. A woman police officef told of arresting her, the week before, as she lurched perilously among the traffic on a busy roadway Kentish Town.

"Have you any questions? the magistrate asked Margaret. "Listen, that night I'd been to the pictures," she said, "my home's Southampton, after the pictures. I went to the fish shop . . ." Her words slurred into each other, barely comprehensible.

Margaret frowned, and as again the silence had become for her loud in gibberish, she began to reply in kind. Her fury mounted, and suddenly was spent; as the gooler took her arm and led her gently away to where the kindness surrounding her could be trans-lated quietly into words she could understand.
